

More than 29,000 Investment Professionals Worldwide Pass Level I CFA Exam

Candidates grew 14% globally with strongest growth in Asia Pacific region

Sydney, 8 March 2018

CFA Institute, the global association of investment management professionals, reports that 43 percent of the 68,086 candidates who took the December 2017 Chartered Financial Analyst® (CFA®) Level I exam have passed. These successful candidates now progress to Level II of the CFA Program, the second of three steps toward earning the CFA charter, one of the most respected and recognized investment management credentials in the world. The December 2017 exam saw continued growth of more than 14 percent from 2016 in the number of Level I candidates who tested for the CFA Program.

“CFA Institute is committed to raising professionalism in the investment management industry, and the CFA Program lays a solid foundation by instilling the highest standards of ethics, education, and professional excellence in candidates worldwide,” said Paul Smith, CFA, president and CEO of CFA Institute. “Congratulations to our successful Level I candidates, who are one step closer to becoming CFA charterholders and joining us in our mission to build a better world for investors.”

To earn the charter, candidates must pass all three levels of the exam, which is considered to be the most rigorous in the investment profession; meet the work experience requirements of four years in the investment industry; sign a commitment to abide by the CFA Institute Code of Ethics and Standards of Professional Conduct; and become a member of CFA Institute. Fewer than one in five candidates who begin the program end up successfully earning the charter. Successful candidates take an average of four years to complete the CFA Program (View historic pass rates).
